Monthly comment

The Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Infrastructure Fund showed steady performance in February and continued to outperform its benchmark. Several portfolio companies reported positive Q4 results, displaying strong fundamentals across most infrastructure sectors. However, the macroeconomic environment remains uncertain due to rising government yields in both Europe and the US, impacting valuations of longer duration assets like towers and utilities. While broader equity markets saw positive performance driven by large-cap tech companies and investor excitement about artificial intelligence, listed infrastructure continues to trade at a discount to broader indices and historical multiples. Waste managers, data centers, and airports were the main positive contributors to sector performance, while towers and utilities lagged. North America outperformed Europe, with the US economy and labor market remaining robust.

Waste management companies, including Waste Management and Republic Services, were among the best performing holdings during February. The companies experienced improved margins and increased unit profitability due to lower inflation. In 2023, Waste Management and Republic Services both achieved a 7% and 13% increase in EBITDA, respectively, improving profitability while maintaining revenue growth. Furthermore, both companies have consistently demonstrated the ability to raise prices above inflation, indicating potential for further margin improvement in the future.

On the other hand, European tower companies, including Cellnex and Inwit, experienced a decline in share prices during the month due to the increase in government yields, despite the absence of negative company-specific news. Towards the end of the month, Cellnex reported Q4 results in line with expectations. The upcoming significant catalyst for the company will be the Capital Markets Day in March, during which the new management team will unveil the strategic plan and present new financial targets.

Finally, Equinix, the leading global data center operator, reported Q4 results that surpassed expectations and provided a strong outlook for 2024. The company anticipates continued growth in AFFO per share at a rate of 8-10% in 2024, with the primary drivers being price increases and margin improvement, particularly due to lower energy costs. We view data center operators as key beneficiaries of Al-related applications and consider Equinix to be the highest quality global datacentre operator.
