Monthly comment

The Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV – Listed Infrastructure Fund delivered its strongest monthly performance since inception nearly 20 years ago, while global equity markets wobbled but remained largely flat during the month. There was intense volatility in global markets during the month, as fears swirled around AI's impact, especially on the software sector. However, notably, every single portfolio company in the fund performed positively, indicating the broad-based nature of the performance. Encouragingly, performance was driven largely by very healthy 2025 results among the fund's portfolio companies.

By sector, logistics and communication infrastructure led performance, while airports and social infrastructure were more muted. Regionally, European and North American equities in the portfolio outperformed those in emerging markets.

Among the strongest performers were US less-than-truckload (LTL) carriers, including XPO, Old Dominion Freight Line (ODFL), and ArcBest (ARCB). The group extended the strong momentum seen in recent months as all three companies reported better-than-expected Q4 results and guided to a healthier freight environment in 2026 than previously anticipated, resulting in multiple upgrades to earnings estimates. This was further supported by a sharp increase in the US manufacturing PMI for January—often viewed as a leading indicator for freight volumes. All three carriers are now up more than 60% since the November trough.

European tower operators also contributed positively. Cellnex (CLNX) was driven by promising 2025 results, improving organic growth and a substantial increase in cash flow expected in 2026, with falling yields providing a further catalyst for the sector. Inwit (INW) also performed strongly, further aided by reports that it may be taken private at a substantial premium to the previous close.

Within data centers, Equinix also stood out. The company reported very strong 2025 results, with 2026 guidance coming in ahead of market expectations. Organic growth rates have continued to improve, but rising EBITDA margins through 2025 were the main driver behind the strong results and the stock's performance during the month.
