Monthly comment

In March, the broader equity markets displayed an increased volatility. Overall, the economy remained relatively strong with robust labor market and consumer spending, although US manufacturing data has begun to show some softness. Towards the middle of the month, financial markets weakened due to turmoil in the US and European banking sectors. Despite these headwinds, while overall interest rate expectations came down, the European Central Bank continued to increase the interest rates. The Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Infrastructure Fund suffered among this market trend and also posted a negative performance for the month, albeit closing the first quarter of the year with a positive performance primarily supported by sectors such as airports and toll roads. During the month, waste managers and data centers helped to stabilize performance with overall positive development, while Chinese gas utilities were the clear outliers due to FY 2022 results which came in below expectations.

The best performing portfolio company this month was Infrastrutture Wireless Italiane ("INWIT"), which operates in the wireless network infrastructure sector. The company reported solid full year 2022 results and raised guidance for 2023. Revenue and EBITDA both increased by approximately 9%. Organic growth and free cash flow generation were strong and are expected to remain highly visible in 2023 and beyond. Management announced to increase dividends and announced plans for a share buyback program. Moreover, INWIT's business model is based on long-term inflation linked contracts, which offers protection in an inflationary environment.

In contrast, China Resources Gas performed weakly in March. The Chinese gas distributor reported disappointing results towards the end of the month, which had been widely anticipated by the market over the past few weeks. However, we continue to consider the stock to be attractively valued and believe these headwinds are rather shortterm with strong recovery expected from the government's support for better gas infrastructure.
