Monthly comment

Global equity markets recovered strongly in July, though economic growth is expected to remain subdued in 2022 and next year, as the IMF revised downwards its projections for global GDP growth. The US inflation rate also rose to 9.1% from a year earlier - a four decade high. With the job market remaining tight however, the US Fed announced a second consecutive 75 basis points hike, but indicated that while it may hike by a similar magnitude in the future, the increase in rates will depend on inflationary and economic data. This was widely interpreted by investors as a signal that the Fed may pivot and reduce the rate of hikes, eventually leading to a recovery in equity markets during the month. The Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Infrastructure also grew strongly during the month and outperformed its benchmark. The Fund continues to outperform the MSCI World on year-to-date. The positive performance was supported by communication infrastructure and railroads sectors, while regulated utilities grew more sedately during the month. Regionally, most markets performed strongly, with the exception of Chinese equities in the portfolio.

One of the best performing companies in July was Cellnex, the Spanish tower operator, which benefitted from positive news. The company announced this month that it will no longer bid for a stake in Deutsche Telekom's towers business. While the acquisition would have allowed Cellnex entry into the largest European tower market and where it has previously not had presence, the company maintained financial discipline and could not match the offers made by another consortium. Overall, growth outlook for Cellnex remains favorable and the company continues to have ambitious expansion opportunities in Europe.

Finally, Canadian National Railway also contributed positively to this month's performance. The railway operator received a boost from greater freight volumes, high prices and from fuel charges pass-throughs in Q2 results. The volume growth outlook for H2 was also boosted as Canadian grain volumes will be materially higher this year as compared to the previous year.
