Monthly comment

During September, global markets experienced negative performance due to renewed concerns about ongoing rate hikes among investors. This followed inflation reports that showed an increase, which was mainly due to rising energy prices, while underlying price pressures remained mostly mild. Furthermore, some market observers have expressed the view that the market's progress has already accounted for a significant portion of the improved earnings predictions. The Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Private Equity Fund recorded a negative performance in September. Sectors that generally benefit from elevated interest rates, such as BDCs and parts of the asset manager sector, were the largest positive contributors to the fund's performance.

The Guernsey-based investment company NB Private Equity Partners was one of the top-performing holdings in September. The company gave an update on its portfolio performance, revealing that its net asset value (NAV) per share had risen by 1.8% between January and August 2023. The positive performance was a result of a combination of strong organic growth in various portfolio companies, as well as mergers and acquisitions that added value. Management is optimistic about the future and highlighted NB Equity Partners robust balance sheet and high-quality portfolio, which they believe will continue generating significant value for shareholders.

In contrast, Hg Capital, UK-based investment firm focused on the tech sector, had a weak month. The company recently released its half-year results. Although the company's share price performance has weakened, the interim results were good, with a NAV increase of 4.6% for the period. The portfolio continued to perform well, with sales and EBITDA growth of 29% and 30%, respectively. However, investment activity was slower in the first half of 2023, as management adopted a cautious stance on portfolio expansion. Nevertheless, the management team noted that transaction conditions gradually have started to improve.

Finally, Pantheon International, the British private equity fund, recently released its monthly performance update for August. The update indicated that the company's NAV had increased by 1.4%. The portfolio generated distributions from the sale of three relevant companies, namely Pizza Hut Australia (which is the Australian arm of the largest pizza chain in the world), a corporate service provider in Hong Kong, and a provider of energy solutions and services in Austria. Overall, the portfolio remains strong, with approximately 20% annualized revenue growth and around 20% annualized EBITDA growth over the past five years.
