Monthly comment

In November, global equity markets turned volatile fuelled by concerns regarding the emergence of a new coronavirus variant, Omicron. Soon after South Africa identified a fast-spreading strain of the coronavirus, countries around the world responded with a new wave of travel restrictions. Furthermore, comments from the Fed Chairman that the central bank would consider accelerating the tapering of asset purchases, affected investor sentiment. In this context, Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Multi Asset Income dipped slightly.

One of the best performers was the Swedish real-estate company, Castellum AB which successfully completed the acquisition of Kungsleden, a Swedish commercial property operator, whose majority assets are situated in Stockholm, Gothenburg, Malmö, and Västerås. The acquisition is an important milestone, considering that the size of Kungsleden's portfolio is around 40% of the Castellum's.

In contrast, the new travel restrictions imposed by several major countries adversely affected transportation stocks such as the Spanish infrastructure operator Ferrovial and French toll road operator Vinci. Ferrovial's share price fell sharply due to the new restrictions in the UK requiring for all incoming travelers to take a PCR test as well as stricter quarantines being applicable for travelers arriving from some African countries. Vinci's stock underperformance was attributable to more stringent travel rules implemented in many countries in Europe as well as in Japan, where it owns Kansai airport.
