Monthly comment

In June, global equity markets continued their weak performance, with S&P 500 recording its worst first half year performance since 1970. June's sharp decline was largely driven by continued concerns around persistent inflation, rising interest rates, as well as a potential recession as reflected in the slump in the US ISM index in June. Similar to the US, Eurozone Purchasing Managers' Index readings fell to the lowest level since February 2021. Against this backdrop, the Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Multi Asset Income's performance fell in line with the market, negatively affected by Real Estate and Private Equity, but partially offset by the stable performance of Infrastructure. Meanwhile, the Fund ended the first half of 2022 with an around 5% outperformance against the MSCI World index.

On a portfolio level, Transurban extended its gain in the month on the back of the continued improvement in traffic as travel-related restrictions have eased in Australia. The company also announced dividend distributions in line with pre-pandemic levels.

Vonovia, on the contrary, contributed negatively to this month's performance. The German real estate company's share price was negatively affected by the rate hike trajectory in Germany: the German 10-year bund yield has risen from negative in 2021 to over 1.8% at a point in June. Meanwhile, the company has made a shift in strategy to adapt to the high interest rate environment by not pursuing acquisitions in the near term, reducing LTV (34% in 1Q22), as well as selling properties under development rather than holding them.

Another negative performer was the Swedish real-estate company Castellum. Investors were concerned about the company's reliance on short-term debt despite the low LTV of 37%. Overall, European REITs were weak in the first half of 2022 due to the fear of repricing of cost of capital. ECB confirms a rate hike in July to control inflation in the economic zone and in Sweden, the Riksbank raised its key interest rate to 0.25% from 0% and plans to hike again in 2022, forecasting that it will reach 1.8% in 3 years' time.
