Monthly comment

Although volatility persisted in October, the Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Multi Asset Income Fund rebounded and recorded a value increase, supported by robust Q3 results. However, a few key inflation reports that were published showed that core consumer inflation further increased, which kept central banks around the world continuing to lift interest rates. During the month, alternative asset managers were the best performers followed by the BDCs, which benefited from the rise in interest rates, as their portfolios consist largely of floating rate investments.

On a portfolio level, the best performing company during the month was the alternative asset manager Ares Management. The company reported strong results with a gross inflow of new capital of USD 14 billion and a continued growth of fee-paying AUM of 3% quarter-over-quarter. The deployments of USD 59 billion during the first three quarters are up 45% compared to the same period in the record year 2021.

In contrast, the US tower company Crown Castle, contributed negatively to the Fund's performance. The published Q3 results were good overall, however, management guidance on new tower leasing activity for 2023 was slightly weaker than expected. The management mentioned that while leasing activity could temporary slow due to economic uncertainties, they emphasised that investment in 5G will continue to deliver momentum to Crown Castle's business.

Finally, the French toll road operator Vinci contributed positively to the Fund's performance. The company convinced investors with its results for Q3 2022. Revenues were higher than consensus expected, which is further evidence of Vinci's strong positioning. Most notably, the autoroutes' traffic levels remained buoyant despite higher fuel prices, whereas growth in airports passenger numbers continued to accelerate in the third quarter at almost all of the network's airports. Finally, the management maintained its guidance for FY 2022.
